cident. Enterprising Reporters. The identical scaffold beam from which Mrs. Surratt and the others connected with the Lincoln assassination were hanged, twenty-four years ago, is rapidly disappearing at the hands of relic hunters. The beam, or what remains of it, is in the post library at the Avsenal, foot of Four-and-a-half street. It is not apparently regarded by the soldiers on duty there as much of a curiosity, for strangers are allowed to slice pieces off with impunity. Nearly one half of the beam was sawed off and sent to California several months ago. There is some talk of placing the remainder in one of the Government museums here.

A Seventh street jeweler whose show window was recently broken by thieves has turned his misfortune to account in an advertising way by suspending inside the broken glass a sign bearing the legend: "There is such a demand for our goods that people cannot wait till

The nurses and doctors in the various hospitals of the city witness many pathetic and romantic incidents. One of them was related to the Camera last evening. For many months there was a patient in the Garfield Hospital , named Mrs. Cusack, an elderly woman, whose life was fast ebbing away, owing to a wasting and incurable disease. She was told about the first of June that she could not possibly live more than a week longer, "Yes, I can," she re-plied; "I must live till the 24th of July, for my Jimmy, that I haven't seen for years, will be here then. As soon as I get a chance to kiss him once more I'll die happy, but until then I must live.

It seems that this poor woman's son was in the penitentiary out in Michi-gan. She calculated that his term, deducting the usual allowance for good conduct, would expire in time to permit of his arriving here on the date she mentioned. She had written to him to come here the moment he was released, and to the astonishment of the doctors she kept herself alive by sheer force of will far into the month of July. As the 24th approached her eyes brightened and she looked as if she would recover

At last the looked-for day arrived. The patient for the first time in many months sat up in her bed, and every time footsteps approached her ward there was a look of eager expectancy in her eyes. As the day wore on and the looked-for visitor came not her strength once more descried her and she fell back upon the bed in a dying condition. She lived till dark, however, and then expired, crying "Oh, Jimmy, I did think you would come." It turned out that although her son had been discharged from the penitentiary on the date expected, he had not cared to heed the summons to his dylng mother's bedside but had gone off on a spree, and was next day back in prison.

The slow rate of speed at which the elevators in the Treasury building run has been a considerable source of annovance, and steps are being taken to have the difficulty remedied. In the War and Navy building and at the Capitol, where modern and improved elevators are in use, the transfer of employes and visitors from one floor to another goes on without interruption. In the Treasury building, however, the In the Treasury building, however, the old styled derricks move along as if the world was to last forever and people had nothing else to do but to enjoy the ride. Just how much time Uncle Sam's employes lose every day riding up and down in these slow coaches is hard to estimate, to say nothing of the loss of time and patience that others have to W 00 W

In connection with the recent investigation of the Senate Committee as to how reporters obtain their information it was very well illustrated in the Flack trial in New York. Dilworth Choates of the World will have to show cause for his presence in the jury room, where the jury was deliberating over a verdict. This case calls to mind a number of other instances of a similar nature that have occurred within the observation of THE CRITIC Camera. Away back in the latter part of the seventies when corruption was rampant in Philadelphia there was a very important meeting of the investigating committee at one of the rooms at the Girard House. The deliberations of this body were considered very important and Grayson P. McArthur was detailed by the Philadelphia Times to produce a report of the meeting without fail. The after-noon before the meeting the room directly above that in which it was to be held was rented by the Times' scribe. The carpet was rolled up, a hole sawed in the floor and another hole punched through the terra cotta, which composed the centre-piece of the

In this way a full report of the pro ceedings was obtained and its appearance in the Times the following day created a sensation. Nat Babcock, a companion of Choate's, and at the present time on the staff of the World, by unearthing the deliberations of a Republican caucus in Denver, saved the West and the country at large the dis-grace of being represented in the Sen-ate by H. A. W. Tabor for a term longer than thirty days.

"Early in the eighties," said a gentle man to the observer, "I was interested in getting the verdict that a jury was to return in a murder trial. By the use of a bottle and a string I succeeded in obtaining twelve ballots from the secondstory jury room during the night, and what took the place of the ballot in the bottle on the return trip can well be imagined. Those twelve ballots were published in the morning paper. The afternoon after publication I was summoned to appear before the judge and give the source of my information. This declined to do, and was consequently fined $50 for contempt of court. I declined to pay, and the sheriff was instructed to lock me up. Within one hour after my confinement the jury, after deliberating thirty-six hours, returned a verdict of acquital, and I was ordered to be released. Had the verdict been otherwise there would have been good and sufficient ground for a new

TRIED TO POISON HIS WIFE.

Another Woman Wrote Him Love Letters- A Wife's Story, Buston, Mass., March 25,-Mrs. E. Clarence Page of Medford, in the Superior Court at East Cambridge yesterday, entertained a jury and a roomful of curiosity hunters with a thrilling chapter of her domestic life. She was the first witness for the Government against her husband, whom she charges with having tried to poison her. In a dime museum show Page, it seems, took up with a woman named Huntley Clark, and their mutual infatuation, as shown by the letters exhibited to the jury, supplies the motive Page is alleged to have had in getting rid of his spouse. Here is the dime museum inamorata's first love letter to the prisoner:

St. John, Friday Morning.

My Own Dear Darling: I have arrived so far safely; but ob, darling, I almost wish I had not, for it seems impossible for me to go home and not see you. Oh, darling, how bard it is. I cannot tell you how I feel, darling. For heaven's sake don't try to live without me. I cannot get along without you. Oh, darling, try to be happy and think = will be different some time. Be good, Clarence, for you have some one that loves you better than they do their life. For, darling, you belong to me; you are all mine. Think, Clarence, that I am just as true to you as if I were your wife. Oh, darling, I cannot write even one word more, and all the rest is love and kisses.

Having discovered this and similar ST. JOHN, FRIDAY MORNING.

Having discovered this and similar erotte missives in her husband's possession Mrs. Page also discovered, as she asserts, that her husband undertook to poison her. The matter so worried her as to cause insomnia. As a soporfic Page gave her whisky, but it made her sick. The lemonade he gave her also made her ill with terrible pains. One day she fished out of his trousers a box containing a white powder which the husband missed when he looked for it. Mrs. Page further testified that her husband placed in her coffee and in her macaroni some substance which disagreed with her, and that she saved part of it and took it to Dr. Davenport for analysis. Her health began to fail rapidly, and fearing that she was being slowly poisoned, she caused her hus-Her health began to fail band's arrest.

Glasscock said yesterday: "I notice that some of the papers say I am to captain the New York team. That's not true. I don't want the position."

In reference to the salaries of the men who go to New York, under the terms of the late freeze out, Glasscock sald: "Before Brush went away he called us together and the matter of transfer to New York was discussed. He foresaw that he was going to be forced to sell out, and, of course, he wanted to know whether we would consent to the transfer and what salaries we would demand from New York. Our propositions made through him have doubtless been accepted, as the transfer would not be announced.

A BUTCHER'S BUTCHERY.

Charged With Poisoning His Sweetheart and Other Crimes, WELLSBURG, W. VA, March 25,-A sensational trial was heard in the Probate Court at Steubenville yesterday.

Frank Smith, a wealthy butcher of this place, was charged with poisoning his sweetheart, Bella Simpson.

Miss Simpson, who was a beautiful young girl, died with every symptom of poisoning. Smith attended her in her illness, and gave her medicine with his own hand. • The testimony showed that the girl was in a delicate condition. Smith bought poison and attempted a criminal operation on the girl. He will be held for the Circuit Court.

ONE GIRL'S ROMANCE.

She Fell in Love With a Man on Trial for Murder,

A pretty romance, which began in a court-room in 1888, will come to a realistic end this morning as it commenced-in a court-room-says the Chicago Tribine. In October of that year Gustave Rogge, a German, was on trial in Judge Collins' court on a charge of murdering Michael Horbster at 149 West Jackson street the June previous One of the constant visitors at the tria was Miss Emma Dodd, and she fascinated by the man charged with murder. She sent him flowers, notes and in other ways showed her admiration for the prisoner.

October 8 the jury brought in its verdict. Rogge was found guilty of manslaughter and sent to the penitentiary for two years. After his sentence Miss Dodd expressed a desire to be married to the condemned man, and Judge Col-lins accommodated the couple. The Ins accommodated the couple, The husband left for the prison and the wife began an untiring effort to have her spouse released. She enlisted the sympathies of Judge Collins, and through his effort, she says, secured a year's commutation of her husband's sentence. October 18 last he was released, and the wedded pair began a brief honeymoon, afterward taking apartments at 3351 State the kindergarten connected with Dr. Lorimer's church, and where she is also in charge of a branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Last night Mrs. Rogge had her hus-band arrested on a charge of making threats to kill her. He was locked up married life her husband has made a dozen attempts to kill her. She says that he has driven her out of the house at the point of a knife, and that he made an effort to asphyxiate her by turning on the gas in her room. She could stand his threats no longer, she says, and therefore had him locked up. The last chapter of the romance, though a sec

and Are Preserved Carefully.
From the Boston Advertiser. It is extremely interesting to read in the newspapers of the last century the accounts there given of events which we regard as bistoric. Away up on the upper floor of the Boston Athenœum is a well preserved file of these old newspapers, worth to day their weight in gold. Here are a number of bound volumes of the New England Chronicle or the Essex Gazotte, a quaint publication which later on was called the Independent Chronicle and Universal Adver-tiser. In 1775 it bore the imprint of "Samuel Hall, Harvard College." A little later it was said to be "printed by Samuel Hall at his office next to the Oliver Cromwell Tavern in School street." Still later the name of Hall disappeared and it bore the name of "Powars and Willis at their office opposition to be a superior of the same of posite the new court house, Queen street." The issue of this queer old paper for March 21, 1776, (it was printed paper for March 21, 17.6, (it was printed weekly) is very interesting, especially to those Bostonians who saw the flags floating from the city staffs yesterday and remembered that it was Evacuation Day. Read what it says:

"Last Sabbath the British Army in Boston, under General Howe consists."

Boston, under General Howe, consist-ing of upward of 7,000 men, after sufing of upward of 7,000 men, after suffering an ignominious blockade for many months past, disgracefully quitted all their strongholds in Boston and Charlestown, fled from before the Army of the United Colonies, and took refuge on board their ships. The most material particulars of this signal event are as follows: About 9 o'clock a body of the enemy were seen to march from Bunker's Hill, and, at the same time, a very great number of boats, filled with troops, put off from Boston and made for the shipping, which mostly lay below the Castle. On the first discovery of these movements the Continental Army immediately paraded, Continental Army immediately paraded, several regiments embarked in boats and preceded down the river from

The troops in the river, which were commanded by General Putnam, landed at Sewall's Point, where they received intelligence that all the British troops had left Boston, on which a detachment was sent to take possession of the town, while the main body returned the town, while the main body returned up the river. About the same time General Ward, attended by about 500 troops from Roxbury, under the command of Colonel Ebenezer Learned (who unbarred and opened the gates), entered the town from that quarter, Ensign Richards carrying the standard

"The command of the whole being then given to General Putnam, he proceeded to take possession of all the important posts, and thereby became pos-sessed, in the name of the Thirteen United Colonies of North America, of all the fortresses in that large and once populous and flourishing metropolis, which the flower of the British Army, headed by an experienced general and supported by a formidable fleet of men-of-war, had but an hour before evacuated in the most precipitate and cowardly manner. God grant that the late worthy inhabitants, now scattered abroad, may speedily reoccupy their respective dwellings and never more be disturbed by the cruel hand of tyranny; and may the air of that capital be never again contaminated by the stinking breath of
